

Disclaimer

The following conditions of use apply to the current website:

1. By using our website, you are expected to have read, understood and accepted the conditions of use.
2. The information on the current website is solely meant to provide general information and is intended for general use. No rights may be derived from the information found on this website.
3. The current website was compiled with great care. Spera Advocaten cannot be held responsible for any damage that has occurred or may occur as a result of (in)direct use of incorrect, incomplete or outdated information on this website.
4. If you wish to make use of the information contained on the present website, this is entirely at your own expense and risk. The information that you provide will solely be used for the purposes of Spera Advocaten, and will not be distributed to third parties. In this respect, you are kindly referred to our privacy statement.